Well this is the probably perhaps second last Woroni this year... This is because so far this year I've spent a total of over eight thousand dollars of a budget of six thousand...I think that the budget was totally unrealistic what with inflation and all but THEY say that the surplus could be covered with ads, and of course they're right but it does seem a pity for all the gradual build up of interest to go down the drain so anyway more about this in the next and possibly last exciting edition...watch for THE LONE LENTIL!!!!!!!!!!!! coming soon.P.S: Sigi's joke of the month:

WELCOMING OVERSEAS STUDENTS TO THE ANU -

The Counselling Centre and the Overseas Students' Service along with a group of interested persons have formulated a scheme whereby newly arrived overseas students will be met at the airport or railway station and brought to the places where lodging has been arranged for them.

This project is considered important, as is the experience of anybody arriving in a foreign country, even the smallest difficulties tend to be disproportionately magnified in the beholder's mind. Some such initial impression might mar the entire stay of a foreign student.

In order to minimise any difficulty that might confront a newly arrived student a scheme has been drawn up whereby he would be met on arrival in Canberra by a person from the student's home country and by an Australian who might be a student, academic or any other interested person. They would help the newcomer to settle down and also help in various ways during the initial stages of his stay, e.g. show him around the fair city of Canberra.

This service will no doubt be highly appreciated by the newcomer and would be a very rewarding experience for the two hosts. It might be the beginning of a mutually beneficial relationship and also an Australian who wishes to visit the country of the newcomer might thus establish a useful contact.

We are looking for volunteers to run this scheme among overseas students, their Australian counterparts, academics and administrative staff.

So if you are interested please get in touch with Sandy Kosseck, Communication and Study Skills Unit, Kingsley Street Cottage (near Toad Hall), Kingsley Street, Telephone 49 2972 (during office hours).

DOPE

(ANS/NT) — An intensive study of marijuana smoking in Jamaica, sponsored by the US Government, and conducted by an esteemed body of scientists, has failed to confirm any of the allegations about the deleterious effects of the drug.

The report is likely to boost the cause of US reformers who are working with growing success to end harsh penalties for private possession of cannabis.

Jamaica was chosen for the study because marijuana smoking is pervasive among the working class, having its roots in a century's old folk culture. A moderate user smokes five to eight cigarettes a day.

Such long-term, comparatively heavy use of the drug gave researchers the chance to study the clinical and sociological effects of chronic marijuana smoking on a "normal" working population in its everyday environment.

The report found almost no significant medical differences between marijuana smokers and non-smokers and no physical abnormalities that could be related to marijuana. It found no evidence of withdrawal symptoms or of physical dependency. The study's psychiatric findings did not bear out the claimed effects of cannabis on sanity, cerebral atrophy, brain damage or personality deterioration.

The study was conducted between 1970 and 1972 by the Research Institute for the Study of Man, a non-profit scientific and educational organisation. The institute study was financed by the Centre for Studies of Narcotic and Drug Abuse, a section of the US National Institute of Mental Health.

When the report was released in Jamaica, the Government ended mandatory sentences for cannabis possession and the then Minister for Health and Environmental Control, Dr. Kenneth McNeill, called the report "one of the most epoch-making pieces of research of the twentieth century" and said that "it could easily alter the legislation in all countries of the world."

While admitting the need for more clinical research, the report indicated that at present, the risk of chronic cannabis smoking seemed no greater than the risk of chronic tobacco smoking.

The study found no significant difference in the work records of smokers and non-smokers though without exception, users maintained that "ganja" enhanced their ability to work.

The report commented: "Certainly there appears to be considerably less risk to the society of work loss from "ganja" than from alcohol."

Admissions to mental hospitals in Jamaica for alcoholism account for less than one per cent annually, in contrast to other Caribbean areas where ganja use is not pervasive and admission rates for alcoholism are as high as 55 per cent.

BIGGLES SHOCK HORROR

Squadron-Leader Bigglesworth walked purposefully across the tarmac. It was a cold, grey, November morning, and the mist was drifting across the desolate airfield. Biggles clambered onto the wing of the waiting Jupiter and lowered himself into the cockpit.

"Weather looks dicey", observed Ginger drily.

"The sooner we get off the better," murmured Algy, "I'd rather see this bally fog from topsides."

"Shut up, the pair of you," snapped Biggles, "and hand me the substances."

"Oh, you're not going to smoke, are you Biggles?" queried Algy.

"It's such a bally awful smell," added Ginger ruefully.

Biggles took some resin from the First-Aid box and working away with his pen-knife soon had enough to fill a generous joint. He lit up briskly, and slamming the Jupiter into full throttle, taxied into the drifting mist, through the hangar, the W.A.A.F. Canteen, a car park, a Social Centre, a model agency and an art-book publisher's delivery depot.

Suddenly he was airborne. Algy breathed a sigh of relief and eased himself out of the co-pilot's seat.

"Oh, it's so hot in here" Algy declared evenly.

He began to unzip his flying jacket and soon stood naked in the faint glow of the altimeter.

Ginger blushed hotly.

Algy returned his blush curtly. Biggles also turned red and blushed and threw the twin-engined Jupiter into a tight turn over the airfield.

"Does my body offend you, Biggles?" queried Algy sharply.

Biggles said nothing. His drug-ravaged features showed no glimmer of emotion. His lips were set, his dilated pupils looked neither to right nor left, his hands gripped the joystick.

Suddenly out of the clouds directly ahead of them Ginger glimpsed the red flash of the Heinkel fighter.

"Look it's von Richthofen," he cried excitedly.

"Get your clothes on, Algy," murmured Biggles curtly.

"Shan't," returned Algy teasingly.

"He's coming at us out of the sun!" yelled Ginger anxiously.

"Put your bloody trousers on Algy," repeated Biggles grimly.

But it was too late, von Richthofen came nearer and nearer. Soon he was in the cockpit.

"My God we're done for," screamed Ginger.

"Aha! all ready are vee!" shouted von Richthofen, tearing off his flying suit.

Soon the little Jupiter monoplane powered by two 770 h.p. Cyclone engines was rocking from side to side, as the dastardly German wreaked his awful revenge on the drug-crazed British lads. . . .

LETTERS to the Editor

Dear Sir,

Deep down, let's face it all of us hate foreigners. It's quite natural when one lives in such a beautiful and perfect country as our own to hate and loathe those greasy-haired snivelling toadies from Europe and beyond. What worries me is that sometimes this hatred is SO deep down that many of us forget about it, and instead of hitting Frenchmen and letting Dagos' tyres down we are buying garlic-smelling French cars and eating filthy chunks of Wop dough in stinking Pizza parlours. Now I'm not saying that we should go out and burn down the nearest Eye-tie, Chink Froggie or Pakki restaurant - I think the army should be doing that - but if we are going to keep this lovely country of ours beautiful, clean and deeply religious we must remember that the Young Bigots Club is only a phone call away. They will come round at a moment's notice and tread on packets of Gauloises and throw Grundig equipment down the lavatory.

Remember, Tolerance is a great British virtue - let's not waste it on Yids, Polacks, Wops, Krauts and Arabs.

Col. Sir Harry McWhirter
M.C.C.
Chairman, The Bloody
Bigots Club - 1937-93

Dear Sir,

The ever-present problems which face us today, as they did yesterday, and - do we need warning? - may well face us tomorrow, or the day after, or next Tuesday - just a moment, let me jot that down - where were we?

I feel urged by the Spirit of Indignant Democracy [SID - Ed.] to register outraged protest against what your the word escapes me publication calls "labour relations". And what if young children or aged parents?

Sir, it is plainly obvious that the "workers", as they call themselves mark you, work and the others do whatever it is that they do, so why the need for all this negotiation and arbitration?

May I quote Eisenhower as my authority: "Things are more like they are now than they have ever been before."

GANG BANG SHOCK HORROR

GANG BANK WILL NOT APPEAR THIS WEEK. Chuckling Lees is in custody for leaking in a public place.

AMA CAPITULATION SHOCK HORROR

The ACT chapel of the AMA has announced that it will co-operate fully with the Medibank scheme in the future.

"We've been behaving like a union" the Secretary Dr S. Bones announced. "In future we'll accept whatever pay and conditions the government offers."

"It's up to responsible people like us to set the workers an example" he said climbing into an unroadworthy Rolls with D.C. plates parked in a no-standing zone.

The army was greatly upset by unguarded comments by the Liberal Minister for Defence Mr Jim Kill'em to the effect that the Australian Army's unpreparedness was such that "it could not take Red Hill on a hot day."

Mr Kill'em later explained that he was talking about the Red Hill restaurant.

He said "I've swum bare arsed in the Condamine with aborigines. So don't tell me I don't know Juni Morosi when I see her."

SHOCK HORROR AT CAR POOL

from our Woden Valley Correspondent.

The Australian Government has closed the Commonwealth Car Pool as an economy measure.

A spokesperson for the Department of the Capital Territory, Ms Elasticity Spunge, said that the closure would be retrospective to last Thursday. "Any person who has used the pool between now and that time will be required to repeat the journey by bus, in his own time and at his own expense" the spokesperson said."

Visiting public servants will be issued free a copy of the timetable for route 31 (Airport-Civic). Ms Spunge defended the charge of extravagance by pointing out that it would result in savings in both Commonwealth biros and paper. "There is a limit to the number of second division officers that can fit around one timetable board." The cars will be disposed of in the usual way. An ACT Police mechanic is reported to be ferrying P76's to Long Gully Tip at the rate of five a day.

The Transport Workers' Union has called out all car pool drivers on strike until further notice. The Secretary of the Canberra branch of the Union, Dr Tobias Belch, blamed the Public Service Association (4th Division officers section) for the closure of the car pool. They're getting back at us over the bus strike in April" he said.

The Department's decision is believed to be based on the belief that Canberra required only one public transport system, not two as at present. However, their original scheme for the abandonment of the bus service ran into opposition from the Treasury who were worried about the excessive depreciation which might occur on a fleet of brand new but unused buses. The problem of disposal of the timetables for the new services allegedly due to be introduced in the next few months, was also a contributory factor in the decision. The combination of dust and moisture since these timetables were first printed in 1972 has converted them into material suitable only for bus shelters. A ten man design team is working on the project, but is not expected to find a solution for some years. An unusually reliable source informed the Gundaroo Times that a route 16 bus from Civic made an unscheduled stop outside the Prime Minister's Lodge last night. A burly gentleman, a horse and twenty Commonwealth Police alighted. The driver refused a similar courtesy to two masked men who wished to be dropped near the mint. In a further move, the government has taken advantage of the financial problems of airlines operators in Queensland and the Northern Territory (caused by a previous economy measure which removed subsidies for services in this area) to purchase a fleet of DC3's. These will be used, with the seats removed, to ferry members of parliament to special meetings of both houses. Broadcasts of these meetings will replace Divine Service and Family Favourites on the ABC on Sunday mornings.

"It might just fit into the Molonglo Interceptor Sewer", says designer Jack Munday, itinerant disaster area of Manuka, A.C.T. Otherwise it'll be a job when they start bringing the concrete."

Morosi Shock Horror

A new suburb in the Canberra complex of Gungahlin will be named Morosi it was announced today.

Church leaders representatives of civic groups and town planners have complimented the NCDC for the aptness of the name.

Ms. Morosi interviewed in Sydney today said she was thrilled stiff by the decision and said she had no prior knowledge of it.

I must admit I am a little surprised but I think it's a good choice because I put everything I had into working for Jim Cairns and the Whitlam government. I suffered a great deal and took many knocks in determination to serve Jim Cairns and his colleagues." Ms. Morosi said.

Ms. Morosi was the quietly spoken and selfless figure who worked for Dr. Cairns when he was Treasurer. She created a reputation for self-effacing efficiency and her dedication in contolling an office of 5 highly competent attractive office girls all of whom she appointed herself. Widely commented upon was her meticulous knowledge of Treasury regulations and her refusal to mix her job with her private business interests.

Miss Morosi said she hadn't seen Dr. Cairns since his dismissal but was quite prepared to spare some time with him even though she was running a successful television show five nights a week.

He's only got to ring up my secretary and make an appointment," Miss Morosi said. He knows that."

Blue Nile said many people had hazarded interpretations of Miss Morosi's role in the Whitlam government which were deeply lacking in Christian charity."

He added I have not known her long but in that time we have grown together in a deep and loving Christian fellowship."

He said those without sin are the ones who should cast the first stone and this he intended to do with the Sydney Daily Mirror in the form of a huge $100 000 writ concerning a recent story surlously linking them together.

A spokesman for the Prime Minister a Mr. Fraser welcomed the naming of the new suburb.

He said Let's face it, it was Morosi that got the Fraser Government in. Of course she should be commemorated. There won't be a Labor government for a while now."

"Jimmy said to me - 'Now you're private secretary to the Treasurer take some money out of petty cash and get your hair done' " Ms Morosi recalled in the exclusive interview this page.

URANIUM SHOCK HORROR

URANIUM ENRICHMENT SHOCK HORROR

The Minister for Minerals and Energy Mr Connor will announce today the establishment of a uranium enrichment plant in the ACT.

"Those S.O.B.'s in Port Augusta don't want it so we're going to put it somewhere where no-one can object" he said.

The plant will be sited on Mt. Ainslie. "I'd wanted Mt Taylor" Mr Connor said "but I was thwarted."

A rabbit-proof fence will connect the plant with Fyshwick.

The plant worth $500 million will be surrounded by a ring of nuclear reactors and an H-bomb testing site. "You can't stop progress". Mr Connor informed the Currier with a knowing wink.

POST OFFICE SHOCK HORROR

The Australian Postal Commission has announced plans to build a thousand foot tower on Mount Taylor.

The Chairman of the Australian Postal Commission — Mr Kennedy Ripoff, announced the decision in the bar of the Canberra Hotel last night. "Since July 1st when the Australian Telecommunications Commission split off we have been without a tower" Mr Ripoff explained.

The tower will be cylindrical and painted red.

"No difficulty in obtaining planning permission is anticipated" Mr Ripoff said. The Currier believes that this may be connected with the transfer of planning powers for the ACT to the Postmaster General believed to be one of the Senators McLelland as part of the first of this morning's cabinet reshuffles.

The tower will be used to centralise collection and delivery services for the ACT and the southern tablelands. A large slot will be placed fifty feet below the top for the deposition of letters. Inside a clockwise spiral will sort the letters as they go down dropping them into bulk hoppers on the backs of waiting trucks for distribution.

Mail for Canberra will be sorted on an anticlockwise spiral and placed in individualised boxes at the foot of the column. Each Canberra resident will be issued with a box (at an annual fee of $1000) and will be able to collect mail on the first of the month at a fee of $1 per item.

The central core of the tower will be an incinerator for im properly addressed under-stamped or non-standard items. It will emit a plume of black smoke two thousand feet high which will rival the Captain Cook waterspout as a tourist attraction.

A voucher car-park will be provided on the slopes of Mt Taylor.

When the Currier queried the reliability of the system Mr Ripoff snapped "We're a business not a service."

Great Snot Robbery Shock Horror

"Set 'em up again blue". It was hot and heady in the crowded club bar and two obvious Australian drinking men were piling on their exploits from the world of fantasy that exists between beers.

Blue soon re-appeared with a couple of pots and slid them over the slops.

"Now as I was sayin'" said one Australian to the other "The wildest time I ever had was when I got mixed up with a gang of them urban gorillas around Canberra".

"You know a coupla years back when there was all that fightin' goin' on and with the boongs and the chinks and all that other rubbish. I was at the Uni doin' philosophy when I suddenly found meself in the middle of a bloody political ransom caper. Actually it wasn't my idea. I was sucked into it by a good mate of mine whose name was Oscar. Oscar Throttlebottom. He was the leader of the gang and it was all his idea. He had a girl-friend too - Penelope Pinchpot. Big boobs."

Anyway one day we were all sittin' in the dunny smokin' some junk we thought was that drug stuff, when Penelope who was sittin' on the furthest throne yelled out that there should be finger holes in dunny paper for people who like to scratch their bum while they're wipin' it.

Jeez I said why hadn't I thought of that? I like a bit of a tickle after a food crap and I bet a lot of other people do too. Then I said let's start up our own dunny paper factory then we could make it in footy club colours and call it Fosters or Reschs or even . . . . .

But Oscar threw a spanner at me works. How much do you think a paper makin' factory costs he said. You couldn't pick one up for under a million. Where'd we get that sort of money.

I had to chuck that particular idea then. But just at that moment Penelope had a brainstorm. Women always have brainstorms in Men's dunnies. I've always noticed that.

Penelope said let's hold one of the big dunny paper intreprenuers to ransom until he brings out a special brand of the stuff with finger holes in it. Blue for boys with big holes and pink for girls with little holes. Even a sort of pinky-blue double size one with ten finger holes in it for young married couples. It would sell like mad. The slogan could be:

The family that shits together fits together or somethime like that.

Beauty I yelled. Even Oscar was impressed. We could do it we thought. All we'd need to do is find something to hold up against the dunny paper makers until they came to the party.

So we sat there and thank. I reckoned that since we lived in Canberra what about knockin' off one of Bugs Bunny's ears? Nah said Oscar that'd be an improvement. We want something more memorable.

"Bravo" "Brilliant" and "Boomer" rose up through the halls of the dunny and I felt as if I'd finally made the big time. I didn't realise it then but I'd gone in pretty deep and I couldn't get out.

Anyway we all agreed to pick up this snot and then all that was left was to work out the details.

But Oscar didn't think we were being tough enough. We could always take the snot away but they could always get more he said. People were famous for donating unwanted stuff to these charitable organisation in crisis times and if we didn't threaten to do something with it hundreds of snotty noses could appear out of nowhere and we'd have accomplished nothing.

Oscar reckoned we could threaten to drop it on Parliament House or on Civic at lunchtime or something but I thought it would cost too much to hire a plane to

EVERYTHING YOU EVER WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT TEABAGS BUT WERE AFRAID TO ASK.

In the interests of those of our readers who may be having trouble with their tea-making techniques, we have decided to publish, in this exclusive series of candid photographs, an illustrated guide to advanced tea-making for Mature Adults in the privacy of their own homes.

1. Penetration. A little bit of a jiggle.

2. Thorough Immersion.

3. Slowly lift bag clear. Keep a spoon or stick handy.

4. Position stick ready to support bag.

5. Pass string over stick so wet bag is hung over stick and pass string under bag.

6. Wrap string around bag so it is firmly bound to stick.

7. Pull string, thus squeezing bag empty of nice strong tea.

8. Add milk (optional).

The Group Travel Specialists

"Get me a crocodile sandwich and make it snappy!"

Thus spoke the much revered (twice convicted) Guru Gordon "Reebop" Funsten on the memorable occasion of his "coming out" party. A small group of devotees had clustered at arms length from one another all night outside the Fanny Bay goal where the Master was serving penitence over a fabricated case involving a young boy and some toffees. Who will ever forget those first words issuing from out His divine orifice glowing pure as the water of the sacred Ganges—and who among us will ever forget those eternal words that followed as the Beloved one gazed platonically upon the youngest of our sisters:

"Didn't we meet in down town Schenectody? Last Thursday I believe — you were standing on the corner of Vine Crescent and Timfors Drive with an apple on your head humming the William Tell overture — the apple I mean was in fact quite talented. Suddenly from a nearby cardboard pagoda a woman raced out of a doorway screaming "Fire!" and was shot by a man with a crossbow muttering something about humming apples. Sorry about the writing but some bum's got my biro as the doctor with the rectal thermometer in his top pocket once remarked."

Oh there are many stories — so many stories! The Master's divinity - his love of Brahma and His unending humility. . . . I remember one day He had gone to perform his ritual ablutions in the Hyde Park lavatories. He had been absent for some time and I - anxious for His safety (such was my naive and arrogant sin of youth) went to see what had become of Him and — on (I confess it is true) fearing the worst! A quick glance at the backs lined up at the urinal confirmed that the Master was not in attendance there - so - with palpitating heart I began a frenzied search of the cubicles - only to find Him on his knees before a sailor in the position of prayer! And what a power has prayer! Man does not live on millet and rice alone! On His re-joining us He declined our offer of sustenance saying that phosphorous (excellent for the pineal gland — a source of inner light) was not allowed on His strict sunyassi diet and besides which He had already dined . . . oh what power there is in prayer brothers and sisters! I will never forget the light in the eyes of that seaman as he emerged from the Hyde Park dunnies — in the Master's deep well of serenity he had found relief from the tortures of life's frustrations.

Let us pray . . . I believe in Guru Gordon "Reebop" Funsten — Bogus Pastor of the Latterday Church of the Fat Wallet — who was born of the immaculate union (it is written on gold tablets so it MUST be true) of Ram L. Hubbard and Mia Farrow and whose one aim in this life is to convert and thereby save from an eternity of hedonism the greedy and ignorant masses of the world. In laying at His feet my worldly goods I have transferred my guilt to Him Who is Perfect — Without Fault — and extremely wealthy.

Repeat after me . . . "I vow to keep at least one arm's length distant from everyone else on this overcrowded planet (space permitting) to be clean in thought word and deed — to eat pigeon turds — to obey without question or deviation the path laid down by Guru Gordon "Reebop" Funsten and to possess nothing (including common sense). All that I am and all that I have hitherto considered my own I offer in absolution to Him in the knowledge that material wealth is a hindrance to the progress of the soul. Above all I promise not to masturbate when I find myself alone. I understand that the penalty for such abuse is to be cast into the tortures of animal life for scores of years — all this I pledge.

So help me Gordon —

Amin.

The author withholds his/her name on the grounds that the person who threw the pie in Guru Mahariji's face (it should have been laced with cyanide) had the shit kicked out of him by the "devotees" of the "Perfect Mastermind" and while we're on the subject:

WHO WROTE THIS SCRIPT?

I mean have you actually been reading this? This has got to be one of the worst! Half of it's crossing out and the other half is illegible and apart from that it's shit anyway. Just one of my usual efforts in other words — vacuous and extremely untidy frivolity. Why do I write such lamebrained literature? With the cost of ink you'd think I could do better. Even shit is expensive these days. We had a party here and some animal left a grogan in the bathtub. Lucky old Philip had to clean it up. So you see how "different" people are here. "So cultured." Primitives — unbelievable primitives! Bumped into Boadecia yesterday . . ."

NURSE SORBY HORROR SHOCK

The A N U Campus was in uproar today when the latest Health Service scandal broke. The story involving two of the longest serving employees of the Service is said to have even made experienced muck raker J. Roe wince. Your reporter understands that the Vice Chancellor has set up a Select Committee to investigate and report back to him urgently. Rumours that it is to be chaired by well known private detective Richard Refshauge and to have retained internationally known psychologist Des Judge for expert advice are unconfirmed. Des has been quoted as saying "We are just good friends!"

At this early stage not all of the facts are known. However my investigations have revealed enough to allow me rare insights into the operations of the Health Service. What follows is all true but it is not the whole truth. Defamatory material has been rigorously expurgated!

Apparently that charming gorgeous witty assistant Medic Pat Sorby had not been well. A woman much in demand (as much for her incisive conversation as her glorious body) Pat had been living a gay (merry?) life. Late nights heavy drinking and the constant pressure of her desperate gambolling took their toll and it was with no surprise that Service Director Bryan Furnace received into his office an exhausted haggard and far from well socialite. Ever quick to diagnose a disease Bryan had Sorby on his couch in a moment. His cure - plenty of exercise. Thereafter, for several weeks residents of John XXIII College became accustomed to this tiny figure dragging herself in from the South Oval panting and bedraggled.

Furnace had decided that this was no time for half measures the operating table was the only solution.

Despite the best endeavours of all those involved Sorby got no better. Her army of friends demanded a new treatment. She got one. - the knife!

Her awakening from in hospital was apparently a wonderful experience. "When I came to I felt different stronger perhaps with a strange glow in my stomach" was how she described it to your reporter. A feeling of happiness of freedom and of POWER came over her. This was not dispelled when she found out just what had been done to her. Deft hands cutting and tying with sureness and speed had achieved something that no volume of pills could. She had a security far greater than that found in the heart of a mountain of rubber. At last she could relax!

If Pat's troubles were over those of Garran Hall residents were just beginning. If she had been a stimulating companion before now she was overwhelming. Sick students suffering in bleak Garran Hall darkness would be awakened by her kind touch and soothed in their distress. One victim of the Black Death (unfortunately prevalent in West Acton at the moment) was grateful when she arrived. But she could do nothing to save him. The next morning his body terribly ravaged by his disease, was found in his room with a despairing Sorby still working still seeking some sign of life.

It was the healthy Hall students that suffered. Her insatiable energy her calls for early morning dips and her demands for more and more wearing physical jerks went too far. After two deaths in the course of early morning calisthenics. Warden Gored had to act. Himself a victim of her obsession for exercise the prematurely balding Gored moved to suspend Sorby. Tired men and lonely women applauded the move but the staff dominated Governing Body moved in to stop this action. Sorby's mysterious hold over one University appointee is said to have been responsible for this apparently incomprehensible decision. The Warden has appealed to the University Council and there the matter rests.

Womens Refuge Shock Horror?!

The Women's Refuge is at 4 Adams Place Watson. It is a place where any woman with or without children can go to when she has nowhere else to stay — and she can stay there for as long as she needs. The main function of the Refuge is to provide a supportive environment so that women in a time of crisis have somewhere to go to that will protect them from physical violence, provide information on legal matters, pensions and housing but above all will enable women to get their heads together and perhaps for the first time in their lives to make their own decisions about themselves.

The Refuge came into existence out of the realization that the traditional welfare organizations were not providing women with the advice and support that they required. Such organizations have advised women, who have endured years of cruelty from their husbands, to go back to their homes (where women after all do belong) for the sake of the children — the family and because 'hubby really does need you'. Apparently the system prefers battered kids to those brought up by an independent woman. There have even been situations where the police warned women against pressing charges of assault against their husbands by saying "don't you think your husband will be angry when he comes out of prison?" the woman replies 'Yes' so the police say 'Well . . .'. This is what the Refuge is about: it is a shelter for women whose hassles arise because we are women in a male dominated society.

Recognizing these problems a group of women from Emergency Housing and the Women's Movement applied to various government organizations for a house. In February the Dept. of Capital Territory provided a three-bedroom house and an establishment grant. Since its opening there have been about twenty women and children crowded in there at any one time. Of course the house is chaotic — noisy — materially uncomfortable — people sleep on the floor — the washing machine has worn out after three months of being used 20 hours a day and meal times are amazing. However it is a firm policy that no woman will be turned away — so it is largely due to the physical limitations of the facilities that no extensive publicity campaign has been mounted by the Refuge. Yet even with the severely circumscribed publicity the Refuge has received it has been filled to bursting point. This only highlights the extensiveness of the problem of women who are in desperate situations but feel that there is no way out.

The house is run on a collective basis by the women who are living there. They look after themselves and help each other with childminding cooking and cleaning. But they are responsible for themselves. There is a volunteer roster system in which one 'ordinary' person i.e. not a profession counsellor, is on roster 24 hours a day. She receives newcomers and tries to make them as comfortable as possible as well as discussing problems with the women already there and keeping statistical records for government subsidies. All the records are open for inspection by any of the women at the house and care has been taken that the records are not unnecessarily prying e.g. no surnames or addresses are required.

The roster-woman is not in a position of authority and does not provide any answers. Women have been brought up to be submissive creatures — abrogating all control over our lives to father-employer-husband-church.

Women have got to learn to be active and confident — in many cases the Refuge has enabled women to start being self-managing. A big step in this direction is achieved simply by talking with other women who have had similar experiences. After years of trying to hide beatings and mistreatment it is a tremendous release to talk with other sympathetic women and realise that one is not alone in facing problems.

In the few months that the Refuge has been operating several crucial things have been learned:

- 1) Women need a supportive environment in times of crisis which traditional welfare organizations cannot/do not provide:
- 2) Women need childcare facilities — so we are not tied to the home and kept isolated from all human contact save that of husband and children (raising children can be exciting rewarding stimulating etc. BUT it is not natural for any adult to be confined to their company for 24 hours a day.) This has only happened recently with the development of the nuclear family. Under an extended family system no one adult is exclusively concerned with child rearing.

3) Women must be recognized as individuals — we must not allow our station to be determined by our relationship with men when getting pensions subsidies emergency housing (or at any time). This only increases our economic dependence on men.

4) Half way houses are needed.
5) There is a general need for the development of alternative accommodation — designed to be lived in rather than to be a status symbol or an exploitative commercial proposition.

There are many feminists who have ambivalent feelings about the whole concept of Women's Refuges. The Women's Movement expends vast amounts of energy in providing band-aids for an oppressive system which cannot be reformed instead of working for fundamental social change. Women arrive at the Refuge fucked up — get themselves together and return to a system that will fuck them up again. What is to be done? The 'success' of the Refuge indicates the failure of society. However in the meantime we need more Refuges for that we need more money and support.

A.C.T. HOUSING HORROR Shock Bid

Thousands died in the streets of Canberra yesterday in what police described as a "bloodless confrontation" laid on by civic leaders for the public.

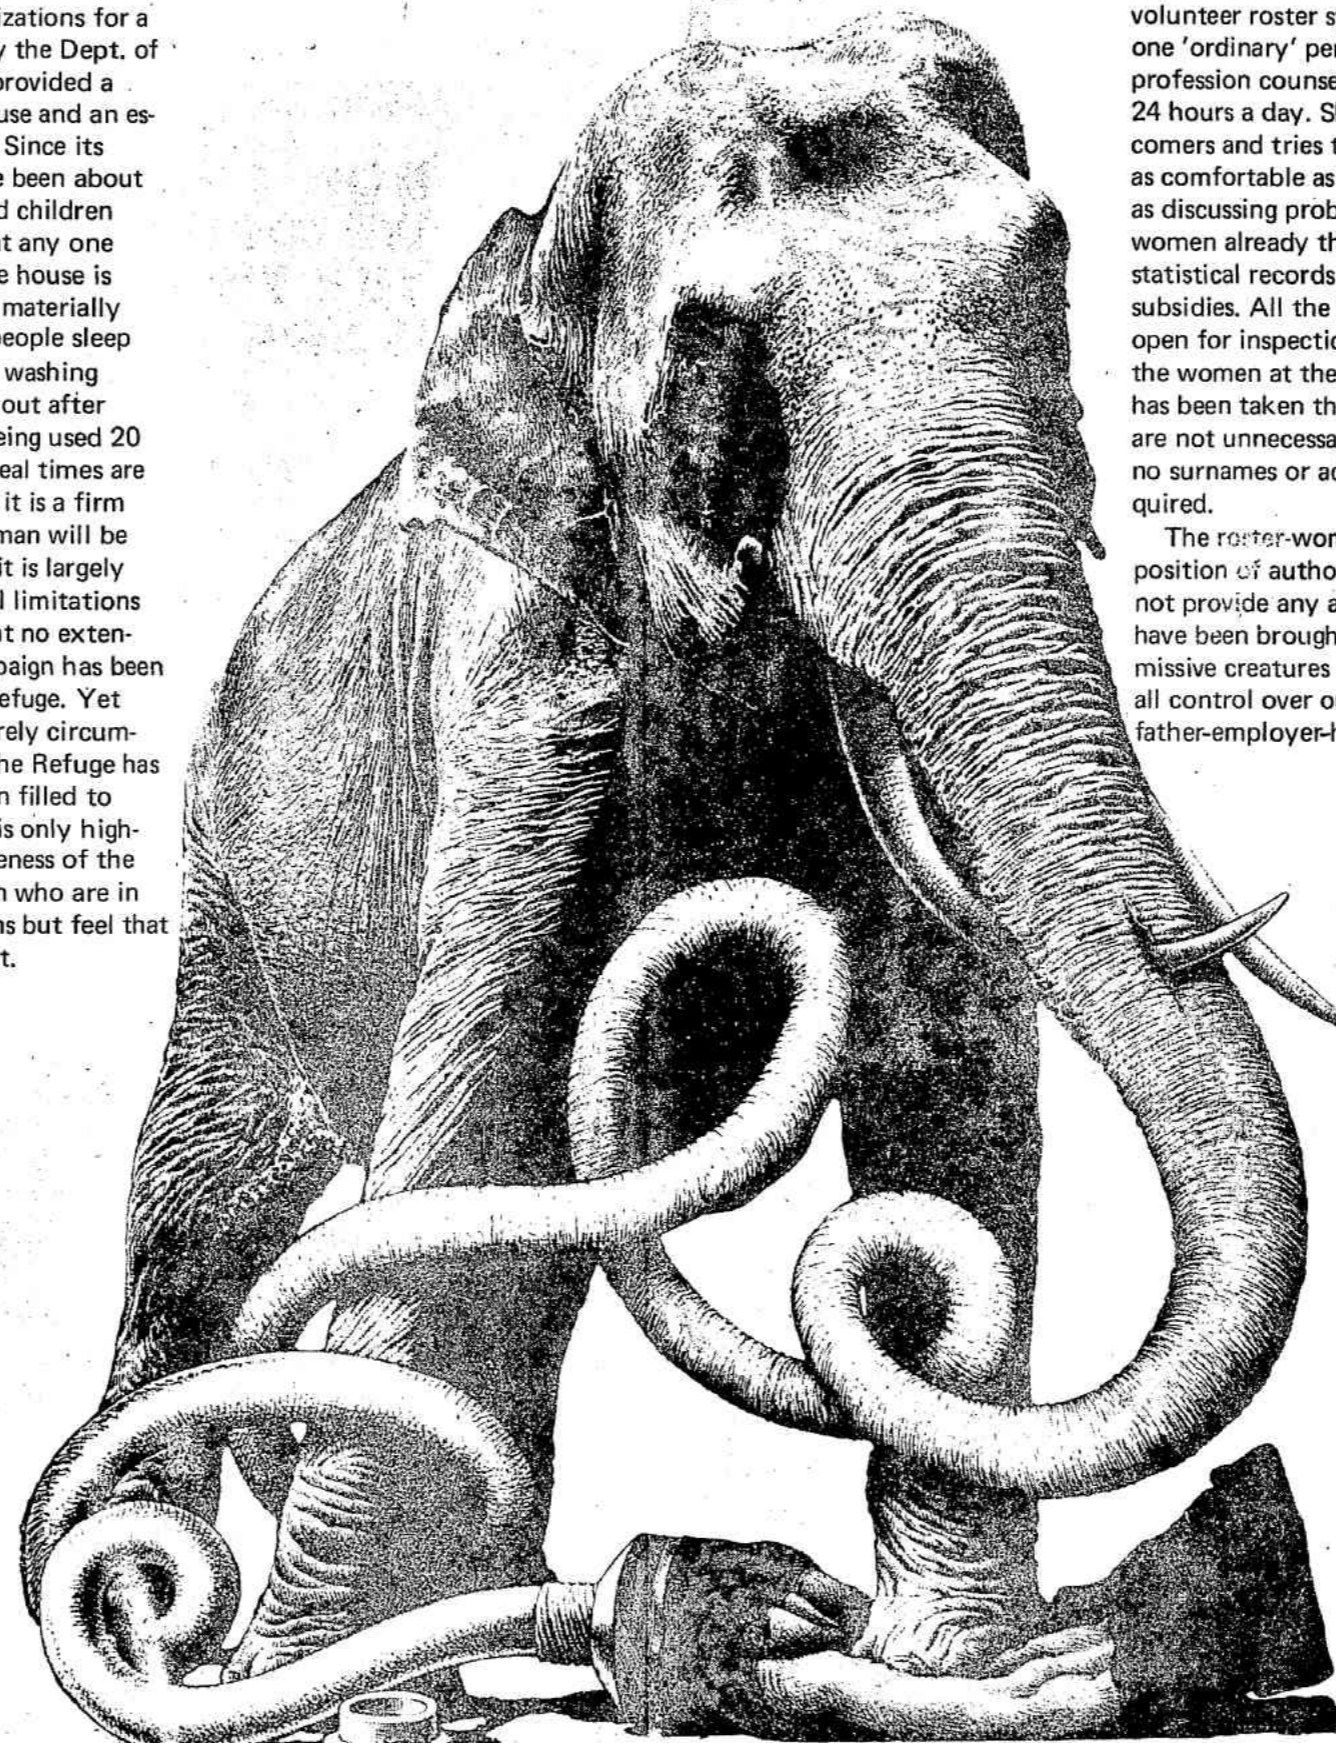

Innocent passerby and sole survivor of the incident, Shanie Moroni, gives her [his?] account of the fray to our intrepid reporter, Y. Knott.

President of the Society for Landlord Protection Raelene Saunders resigned in protest at the failure of the society to pass the death sentence on those who failed to pay double the 'fair rent' and on those who moved into houses held empty by members of the society. In specialising to his motion Saunders pointed out that one could count on the government liberal baron or labor baron to assist in hoarding homes empty to force rents up and have restrictions on Landlords released. He said that the society's Empty Canberra Homes / Help your Friendly Developer Campaign had emptied 20% of Canberra's homes and left 10,000 tenant residents happily housed at Goulburn. The Government had adopted the principle that those who could not buy their own home should be assisted with accommodation in the new Goulburn cell blocks. He said that although the Canberra Committee for Low Cost Accommodation had been declared an illegal organization some of its members were still at large. A group who seized the Garema Place loos as ritzy accommodation for 100 students had been expelled by a combined force from the Society for Landlord Protection — the ANU Staff Association and the ACT police. They attacked with power, privilege, deceit and censorship while the Committee for Low Cost Accommodation retaliated with reams of printed toilet paper leaflets. The Committee for Low Cost Accommodation had declared socialism in one toilet and a provisional revolutionary flush was established by Rae O'Sharkey — Bunny Warren and Dave Shoreup. Saunders condemned the life sentences given to the occupiers as 'kid-glove' treatment.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS SHOCK HORROR

After consultation with a number of certain people, traffic lights will not be installed at the intersection of Officer Cres. & Tyson St., Ainslie. Nor will they be installed at Forbes & Condamine Streets, Turner. Alth

Although ten people have perished horribly and needlessly at these two places in the last two weeks, it was noted by the manufacturers that each of these ten people was a happy person at the time of expiry. The decision of your police was taken accordingly.

HAPPINESS SHOCK HORROR

Every year about this time, wattle time, with empty streets and early morning fogs your police notice a seasonal upsurge of happiness. This is usually only petty happiness but the average citizen is warned to be cautious. Packs of scruffy people are roaming the Canberra streets with the sole aim of rendering the right-minded citizen absolutely happy.

If you are the neighbour of people who you know commit happiness on their premises, do not hesitate to call your police:

happiness, as studies show, is rife in the suburbs as in the empty streets of the lonely city, reflecting the sky like a patient etherised upon a table...

And remember the responsibility of maintaining a decent standard of misery against this rising tide lies with you as much as with me and my colleagues!

SHOCK SHOCK HORROR

Well done to the local branch of the United Australian Police Youth Clubs, especially to Sturmeister Ernest von Swittie of the Warramanga troop! In the recent International Police Chiefs' Association's 1975 Attitudes Contest, Ernie, T2, led his chaps to an astounding victory.

They ambushed a so-called "shopping spree" in Civic of three determined and dangerous rebels from the S.W.O.W.

Armed with Armalite (Regd.) rifles and Stoner (Regd.) dum-dum bullet crowd control machine apparatus, the hopelessly disorganised weirds didn't know what hit them! Another great blow for boredom!!

fly around and drop it so I suggested we threaten to unload it into Canberra's water supply. We could always hire trucks or even do it ourselves with a couple of trailers.

Anyway it was decided. We were going to rob the Green Cross Snot Bank and then threaten to chuck all the snot into Canberra's drinking water unless someone came up with dunny paper with finger holes.

Set 'em up again blue.

Our next problem was how to break in and get the stuff. We could storm the place like a bunch of paratroopers or we could dig a tunnel into it. After a lot of discussion we decided that we'd better storm the place because if we were just a little bit out in measuring our digging we could come up in the middle of the snot vault and all the snot would be able to get out.

Next thing was where to store it when we got it out.

Penelope had the answer to this one. She used to be in a circus as the lady with the biggest boobs and she knew where she could get hold of twenty elephants who could hold the snot in their trunks.

So the plans were made. We'd storm the Green Cross Snot Bank like a bunch of paratroopers with twenty elephants running behind us. The elephants would then fill up with snot and we'd race back to our hideout in the ANU dunny.

That Friday afternoon we put our plan into action. It came off without a hitch except for one elephant who got the sneezes on the way out and mucked up the wall paper a bit. But on the whole everything went okay.

Our next problem was to communicate our demands. It was unanimously agreed that the letter should have two attachments - a) toilet paper without finger holes and b) toilet paper with finger holes.

On Saturday morning we sent it off with a letter of approval from the Builders Labourers Federation (NSW branch). On Monday night we were on the news. All the police in Australia were looking for us. But we laid quiet in the ANU dunny with all the comforts of home. There was Oscar and me twenty elephants the biggest boobs in Australia and about four tons of wanted snot.

We knew how important it was to keep tab of how much snot was wasted and evaporated et cetera. Being such a life-giving commodity we would have to replace every single drip of it when our demands were met. On Tuesday morning our first complication arose.

Elephant Number 14 got a cold and his trunk started running. Most of the other elephants caught the germ too and it wasn't long before we were up to our ankles in the really runny type of snot.

This was a catastrophe. How were we ever going to replace all that good snot? We hired an out board motor to use like a mixer to beat the runny stuff into a thicker mix but it didn't work. The snot went all fluffy like a meringue and the noise frightened the elephants so we stopped.

I said to Oscar it looks as if we're finished but Oscar said he had an idea.

That night he and I found ourselves climbing through a bed room window with a feather and a cup. There was a bloke snoring in bed and Oscar and I sneaked over to him. I held the cup under his nose and Oscar tickled it with the feather. About ten seconds later the bloke sneezed like mad and the force of the blow knocked the cup out of my hand and I said shit because I copped a lapfull of warm snot. The bloke woke up but we made our escape.

If I had've picked up the cup on our way out we would've been alright but I was in too much of a hurry. The bloke called the cops and they found the cup which of course had "ANU dunny" printed all over it. So they knew where we were. Their problem was... which dunny? As everyone knows there are over 300 dunnies at ANU and because of the accommodation shortage each one is overcrowded with sleeping bags dogs tents and so on and they knew they'd never find us.

But they worked out a plan. What they did is they went around to every dunny in the Uni and secretly put wallpaper paste on all the dunny paper. Then the cunning buggers put laxettes in the hot chocolate at dinner time so that everyone had to use a dunny that night. The next morning she had a bum inspection and compared the paper stuck to our bums with the paper that the ransom note was written on.

It did not take them long to find us.

But we had it all worked out.

We'd say it was all Penelope's idea and when she got picked up she could whip her gear off and turn it on for the coppers and that way she'd get let off too.

And that's the way it all happened.

These are some of the Vatican's exceptional assets:

A well-trained and mild-mannered force of mercenaries, styled the SWISS GUARD, in uniforms probably designed by Michelangelo. No force in the world can match their experience of standing up to massed photographers. Warranted not to sack or pillage.

A superb summer residence at Castel Gandolfo, in the Alban Hills, also protected by Swiss Guards, and enjoying all extra-territorial rights.

A magnificent GREAT WHITE AIRCRAFT for foreign tours.

Extensive financial and investment department, staffed by dedicated priests, bishops and cardinals (this department is in some need of overhaul and restoration).

Numerous limousines, recently blessed, maintained to the highest mechanical and spiritual standards.

Patronage over famous Orders like the Knights of St. Gregory and Knights of Malta. Purchaser will be able to create his own Counts and Countesses.

The ART TREASURES of the Vatican, housed in Sacred and Profane Museums, are expected to realise scores of millions of pounds. They include world-famous works by Michelangelo, Rafael, Leonardo da Vinci and Caravaggio. The contents of the Hall of the Muses, the Hall of the Animals, the Room of the Busts and the Cabinet of the Masks are all described in our

That Building of Exceptional Charm and Character, the Basilica of St. Peter's, with Colonnades Capped by Statues of 140 Saints!

Enclosed by High and Impregnable Walls, the Vatican has been called the Kremlin of the Tiber. The smallest state in the world, it is also the only state which tourists must pay to enter. Developed to the highest standards over many centuries, the Vatican City State is the world tourist centre par excellence.

Present Incumbent Retiring to Avignon Due To Misplaced Faith in Human Nature

"It will be very sad to see the Vatican dismantled," said the Rev. Ian Paisley, of Belfast. "I have often inveighed against the Scarlet Woman of Rome, or 'Old Red Socks,' but I never thought it would come to this. Now there will be a grievous gap in the annals of vilification." Asked if he would bid for any of the Vatican treasures, Mr. Paisley said he would welcome a pair of well-washed red socks as a souvenir.

A spokesman for multi-millionaire recluse Howard Hughes denied that he was acquiring the Vatican for resale to King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. "It is a particularly stupid rumour," he said. "The King already has one Mecca on his hands. A second, Roman Catholic one would be an acute embarrassment." The spokesman did not exclude the likelihood that the Vatican will go to oil-rich Arabs who have been trying to gain a foothold in the Eternal City.

Warning to Purchasers:

In 1859 the Papal States had an area of 17,218 square miles, but almost all this territory was absorbed into unified Italy in 1870. The Vatican City State now occupies only 109 acres. The Liquidators hold out little hope that these lost lands can be recovered; purchasers attempting reconquest do so at their own risk.

The following questions and answers may be of assistance to potential buyers.

I would like to acquit the Vatican for tax loss purposes. Are there any snags?

Yes, you might find it eventually showing a profit.

How would I transport a basilica to Texas, assuming my bid was accepted?

Shippers of basilicas advertise in the Yellow Pages.

Are there any Indulgences going cheap?

There are hundreds of blank Indulgence forms in the Vatican cellars, but they are so dilapidated as to be unserviceable.

I am a collector of cowls and torture equipment from the Inquisition. Is there anything for me in the sale?

No. Why not collect Adorations, Ascensions and Assumptions for a change?

I have often read that the Pope owned the Rome Hilton and the Bank of the Holy Spirit. Are these institutions also up for grabs?

Not yet.

Could I just buy the Pope's Osservatore Romano newspaper and leave the rest?

Yes, or you could buy the rest and leave the Osservatore Romano.

U.S. INVASION SHOCK HORROR

In a special announcement today the British Prime Minister, Benito Churchill, announced that Australia was being handed over to the United States of America in return for American Lend-Lease supplies to Great Britain. The Prime Minister said that this was in accordance with the secret American proposal for the subdivision of the British Empire. However, British investors were assured by the Prime Minister that the changeover in Australia would be carried out under the close supervision of American troops and that British investments would be guaranteed or fully compensated for by the American Administration under General Douglas MacB52.

New York Times feels that Australians can be much re-assured by Mr Churchill's statement and by President Roosterbelt generous terms for Britain. American motor and mining companies saw Mr Churchill's decision as "realistic" and indicated that after a few initial industrial and personnel problems the future looked bright. The appointment of US General MacB52 was hailed as especially "sensitive to Pacific problems" particularly in the economic area. While this is a halt to the General's Presidential ambitions, most commentators feel that the experience that he receives in Australian government can only benefit him in future assignments.

In the City the general reaction was calm. Financial circles displayed awareness that American leadership in Australia would make an overall rationalisation of British and American investments possible, whereas the Japanese offers were far less generous.

Across the Atlantic reaction has been equally favourable. The Australia's Prime Minister, John Curtains, naturally agreed with the new arrangements for Australia, thus assuring his Socialist Labour Administration of a continued period in office under General MacB52. He urged all Australians to do their duty and to be co-operative in every way. Australians would "tighten their belts and moderate excessive wage demands to keep America involved in Australia", he said. "If we want the Yanks to stay and protect our mineral resources and car factories after the war, we have to prove to them that we can do as we are told during the war. We know the British Empire is finished, we know what we would lose under the Japanese, so America is the only answer", Mr Curtains said. The Leader of the Opposition, Mr Hughes, attacked Mr Curtains' statement, but political reporters in Australia generally agree that Mr Hughes' Party is "unrealistic" and that its future is in doubt.

Present trends indicate that the Australian Government's wartime powers will be sufficient to ensure co-operation with the new American Administration, although Mr Curtains is very much aware that extremists in the Labour Party might not go along with all the realistic measures that will be necessary to create a climate of US goodwill towards Australia after the war. Economic experts from leading American corporations visiting Australia have indicated that Australians will have to forget about locally produced machine tools, aircraft and a locally owned motor car industry if they expect America to overcome its natural fears of a socialist Government and see Australia as "a good neighbour in the Pacific". Responding to this, Mr Deadman, a member of the Australian cabinet, said that he appreciated the American point of view. "Australia could face difficulties raising international loans or marketing its exports if it opted out of its international responsibilities", he said. Most leading businessmen in Australia expressed agreement with Mr Deadman's remarks and hoped very much that they would be in a position to demonstrate their goodwill to America by using their influence amongst the business community for a more rational world after the war.

Our reporter managed to speak briefly with the Australian Minister for External Affairs who is presently in London. The Minister Dr Have-it, indicated that he hoped to secure a tight ring of American military bases around the whole of the South Pacific region as part of Australia's post-war defence arrangements for British, American, New Zealand and Australian possessions against any Asian threat. He realised that this could be expensive, and further indicated that he would be prepared to settle for United Nations protection on the condition that the Russians could not veto American proposals.

Latest reports indicate that the changeover is proceeding without undue fuss, and that President Roosterbelt has committed two divisions of American troops to Australia as a gesture of American resolve to stand by Australia.
